lorris Meadows evades stink - again

BY TAMARA CUNNINGHAM

Didsbury Review

Morris Meadows residents are furious after a single paper towel threatened to flood their homes with raw sewage again, last week.

"I can't believe this. I thought maybe kids were putting towels down the toilet and stopped last summer Donna Desroches, a resident of the neighbourhood.
"But it's started again. I'm riled."

Commercial-grade towel blocked a pump at a nearby lift station four times in the last seven days.

The jam prompted a second pump to kick in and alarms to sound, alerting Public Works to trouble.

"We were able to quickly fix it ... but if one time we can't, residents could face a backup in their basements," said Charlie Macdonald, manager of public works.

"There is the potential for a big problem here. The lift station in Morris Meadows is no s pump failure - or paper towels. In July 2009, the town pinned notices to doors of people in the area, asking them not to flush commercial grade towels down pipes.

For four months after the notices were handed out, employees did not pull out one refuse-sopping towel from the lift station. The warning seemed to have worked.

Then in December, the lift station was once again plugged with thick wipes

"(In July) I didn't bother trying to figure out who was doing this because I didn't want to spend taxpayers' money if the person would just quit," said Macdonald.

The public works manager said the department believes it's one person doing the flushing and warns if that homeowner doesn't stop, he will find the culprit and "I will be writing a report to council recommending if found, this person pay all the costs incurred in the past year for pulling pumps," Macdonald said. He also plans to ask council to charge the resident for the money spent to find out who was plugging the lift station.

Ideas to reveal who is flushing paper towels are plenty, but Macdonald expects the town will rent several cameras to drop into manholes. The cameras will be trained on pipes to see which home the towel comes out of. The investigation is expected to cost over $20,000.

"If the person using the rag had his own house fill up (with sewage) fine, but it's the 59 other people, not abus-ing the system that I worry about," Macdonald said.

The lift station has two pumps and should the second kick in and be blocked by an additional paper towel, the main pipe could quickly back up with refuse.

The pumps could also burn out from being overheated and it could take 24 hours to replace them.

Desroches cringes when she thinks of the issues a sewer blockage could cause.

"I just put new furniture downstairs ... I don't want to have to replace it if my basement gets flooded," she said.

Lindsay Cooper, who also lives in the area, can't believe one of her neighbours is putting Morris Meadows homes at risk. Her basement is full of toys and tools - things not easily replaced, she said.

And I don't want to have to move either. If my basement is flooded, even cleaned it could stink for months.

.It's bullshit what this person is doing and very, very inconsiderate. I think the town needs to find this person now so we as taxpayers aren't paying for his damage."

Fundraiser kicks off for Haiti survivors

Massive earthquake leaves behind rubble, death

BY TAMARA CUNNINGHAM Didsbury Review

Six-year-old Robbie Reed may not understand the devastation Haiti feels after an earthquake hit the country last week, but he knows enough to include the welfare of children in his bedtime

Robbie was adopted from God's Littlest Angels orphanage in Haiti by Allan Reed and his wife, Gail, and brought to this community last June. When the 7.0 earthquake struck the country the first thing Jan 12, Allan did was call his son's former home.

"I was able to get a hold of the caregiver on Facebook right away and she said that everyone at the orphanage was OK The building was still standing," he said.

He has told his son a little about the massive earthquake that hit Haiti and before bed each night Robbie prays all the children in his country find food and water.

It's a prayer Allan hopes to help answer. He, along with Rod Neufeld and Gord Kerr are hoping to engage the community in a two-week fundraising blitz for fundraising blitz Samaritan's Purse organization that provides food, water and temporary shelter for vic-

Off leash dog park flops

BY TAMARA CUNNINGHAM

Last week, councillors unleashed objections about this town's first ever dog park, with budget constraints and lack of public support at the top of the list.

"I've had quite a few people ... oset about the dog park," said Coun Gayle Veno at a council meeting last Tuesday.

"I don't think we should spend money or have administration spend money on research when we haven't even picked an area (for the dog

Let's leave it alone."

Four councillors agreed that with a limited budget this year, money should instead go to top builds and repairs, like the sewer lagoon and north storm water pond. Although, council is not sure how much a dog park would actually cost.

The park was tabled with plans to review it again next year.

Coun. Bob Davidson was the only councillor to oppose the motion to table the build and Gail Nowlan did not attend the meeting.
"My sentiment from council was that if we had to decide, it would have been a 4-2 vote against (the park) and it would have been done. But we decided to hold it over until 2011," said Mayor Brian Wittal.

There is still a possibility it will still happen."

The off leash dog park has been a bone of contention in this community since it was first suggested last July

Councillors had heard from their constituents that pet owners had no place to let their canines romp and play and began to consider giving either a space near Memorial Park, Southridge Valley or Valarosa to the Thirty-five percent of people said they were against the park, while 65 per cent voted in favour of it.

Thirty-three per cent of residents said they were opposed to it because there were better projects for taxpayer dollars to be spent on Rhea McMane filled out the survey in favour of the park and was disap-pointed in the verdict made Jan. 12.

"I was really excited. It's a great ea ... but with everyone feeling the pinch I can understand how it may not be a priority right now," she said.

With the decision on the park held over until next year, McMane hopes it's revisited differently than it was in

When it's looked at again, (council) shouldn't send a survey to every-one in town. First they need to find out how many dog owners are pre-pared to use it and then take it further," she said.

There's no point in building one if ere aren't enough dog owners who'll go.

Fostering trade with Miki Town

BY TAMARA CUNNINGHAM Didsbury Review

A delegation of town officials flying to Miki Town this March is hoping to tap into Japan's import/export busi-

It's the next step in the relationship between the twinned communities, said Roy Brown, chief administration

We have an educational and cultural exchange program, now we are looking at an economic one," he said.

Mayor Brian Wittal, who will be flying overseas with Brown and Luana Smith, administrative assistant, said the plan is to create a process on how to go about trading products between the two countries

"We have lots of artisans with products unique to our area and could sell well in Japan," Wittal said.

"If businesses are interested in sell-ing there, we want to be able to tell them how to go about doing that."

The town will be looking for contacts in Miki Town to sell products through, as well as import and export regulations and costs. The process

"We are trying to do this now so the opportunity doesn't pass us by ... it was suggested to us by the Alberta Japan International Trade office," Wittal said.

The local group will travel with students from Westglen School, who will be on their annual exchange pro-gram. Officials believe travelling there to make arrangements, instead of doing it by teleconference or phone, will show Miki Town that Didsbury is serious about creating a trade exchange program.

Bill Anthony, owner of Unique Stained Glass Works in Didsbury, is keen on the idea of selling local creations in Miki Town.

"We are talking about businesses in a small town of nearly 5,000 people gaining international exposure. he said. fantastic

He will be sending postcard brochures and his signature computer board stained glass creations with Wittal to show the sister community.

"People all over the world - in Asia. England and the U.S. - buy my stained glass but selling in Japan seems like the next step. It's just finding a way into that market ... and that's what this trip is all about,'

Cheryl Sword, owner of White Raven, still has questions about how this will work and it boils down to

She has imported a variety of items from across the globe and said it's expensive, not to mention challeng-

"You can't afford to send a little here and a little there. It has to be done in bulk," she said.

Then there is the challenge of putting your shipment on a plane or boat ... you have to make sure it gets here OK and a lot gets lost, broken or ripped off."

She said a lot of the artisans selling crafts at her store are also busy filling orders for other shops and she wonders if they could handle supplying another market.

'It's a good idea and could spark interest in Japan about what we have but the logistics are difficult. Truthfully I am not sure how (the town) will do it.

Domestic violence impacts rural and urban communities

DAN SINGLETON

The provincial government should act quickly to expand to rural communities a new response team program designed to support families impacted by domestic violence.

The Domestic Conflict Response Team has just started work in Financed through the Alberta government's Safe Communities Innovation Fund, the response team is receiving $1.5 million over three years to enhance intervention and ongoing support for families impacted by domestic conflict.

The pilot project partners caseworkers with police officers to provide followup support and a tailored response to families identified as high risk for repeated domestic violence, say officials.

"Family violence is a complex issue that has far-reaching and devastating impacts on individuals and families across our province, and successfully address-ing it takes communities working together," said Janis Tarchuk, Minister of Children and Youth Services.
"This team builds on our existing partnership with police services by offering additional help to families to help them make positive changes in their lives and end the cycle of violence."

Fred Lindsay, Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security, added: "A strong partnership between police and caseworkers allows them to work more effectively with high-risk families. By tailoring their response to each situation, the team is better able to address the family's unique issues."

The team will focus on providing services for fami-lies who have had repeated incidents of domestic violence reported to police, and who want to make changes before the courts become involved, he said.

Through coordinated case planning and joint response, the team aims to connect families with com-munity supports within 72 hours of a reported inci-

In a recent interview with this newspaper, spokesperson for Chinook Arch Victim Services, which serves much of West Central Alberta, said there is a real need for more services and programs for domestic violence victims.

'The sad part of it is women are in the most danger when they do leave, so it is really important that they have the right resources and the right tools when they leave. That is the most critical time," she said.

The province should be applauded for the creation of this new response team - any effort to reduce domestic violence and to support its victims is effort well spent. At the same time, the province should expedite the expansion of this new program to rural areas, including into West Central Alberta, because, as Minister Tarchuk rightly says: "Family violence is a complex issue that has far-reaching and devastating impacts on individuals and families across our province

On the other hand, waiting three years for the pilot project to be completed before expanding it to rural communities would be a most unwelcome delay.

Post office litter unacceptable when I walked past the west side of the post office building today to see all of the discarded mail left behind by residents of Didsbury.

I felt it was time to speak out in regards to this matter.

The post office has a responsibility and a legal obligation to deliver the mail, period.

You can request NO fly-ers, but that will only stop the loose single flyers from being put in your mailbox. All of the flyers that are in the newspaper will contin-ue to be delivered and the post office has no choice but to deliver them, in fact that is the law.

When the mail is in your box it becomes your personal property. As such you are responsible for it and if you don't want it you must discard it in an appropriate manner and littering is NOT an accepted manner.

The post office has a huge paper recycling bin on the east side of the building that is there for everyone to use for discarding the unwanted flyers, brochures, etc. that you may receive in the

Is it too much to ask people to take their mail home and recycle it or to walk around the post office building and put it in the recycle bin? It appears it is for some people!

When smaller garbage receptacles were provided they filled up too fast and then they were vandalized and set on fire which was very dangerous. Now all that is asked is that you walk an extra 50 steps around the post office and put your unwanted mail in the large bin instead. Come on people, it can't be that hard to do!!

It is time for those who continue to "fight the system" by throwing their mail on the ground to grow up. act like adults and take some pride in OUR town.

ald you condone your neighbour throwing their garbage over your fence?

This littering will not be tolerated any longer will be asking our Bylaw Enforcement Officer to keep an eye on this and tickets will be given to any of those who are found littering.

This littering is an immature and selfish act that

To all residents, please help us stop the littering.

If someone is throwing their mail on the ground challenge them or report them and our Bylaw Officer will take it from there.

The only way for us to have a friendly, safe and clean community is for everyone to get and care about what is happening within our town.

Respectfully submitted, Brian Wittal

Rosebud Run rallies around sick volunteers

Annual event forms alliance with ALS Society

BY TAMARA CUNNINGHAM Didsbury Rev

When Dena Wannamaker read about Lou Gehrig's Disease, she wanted to sit down and cry

It sounded horrible, she said

And two local volunteers who've helped the Rosebud Run Sled Dog Race in the last four years were recently diagnosed with it. They have a life expectancy of three to five vears.

This is worse than can-There's no cure or chance of remission," said Wannamaker.

When we (the Rosebud Run society) read about it, we felt pretty helpless. We wanted to do something to help.

For the first time in five years, the Rosebud Run Sled Dog Race will cham pion a charity - the ALS Society of Alberta - in hopes it leads to awareand funds for ness research.

Buckets will be available the race grounds for donations and members of the ALS society on hand to give out information.

The partner of a man with ALS or Lou Gehrig's Disease heard about the effort last week - her eyes watered and she smiled

This is huge, absolutely huge. We really feel their support," she said.

And it's so important that people are more aware of ALS. It's not a very high profile disease."

The woman, who prefers not to be named as she and her husband deal with the disease, said they received diagnosis September.

The couple had thought had a stroke because his lower limbs were numb, but the neurologist had other news.

"We were blindsided were when he told us it was ALS. I just looked over at my husband and he looked at me and we both took a huge breath. We never thought this is what it could be."

"There's no cure."

The disease paralyzed her husband's feet and legs first. Months later, he began losing feeling in his arms and fingers. His digits are curling into his palm.

"He is seeing himself quickly lose mobility and he's frustrated because he can no longer do the things he used to love, like read a book or eat," his wife said.

To help him adjust, she pulls in equipment from the pool of supplies offered by the ALS Society of Alberta

Karen Caughey, executive director for the society, said with the disease moving rapidly, there's no time for patients to wait for government-provided chair lifts or hospital beds They need equipment right

"When people get this disease it attacks the nerves and can attack them quickly. One week they will be eating and the next they won't be able to pick up a fork," she said.

"We want to make sure we help them adapt to those changes as soon as they happen. We will bring the equipment to their doors."

There are over 400 pieces of equipment, ranging from power wheelchairs to hospital beds, being used this month alone.

organization will The drop off orders and pick them up - charging nothing, but asking patients return the equipment when they no longer have use for them.

The group also provides support to families dealing with the disease.

"When people get ALS, it's like what do we do now? We help them get connected to the right resources," she said. "This isn't a very positive disease - it's a death sentence - and we want to give people someone to turn

The race is no stranger to rescheduling. In 2006, the race ran after four postponements, while the 2007 event began after three. In 2008, the Rosebud was cancelled all together.

Altalink hosts events

Olds will be the only community in the Mountain View County area that will be the site of one of a series of new open houses by Calgary-based electrical transmission company Altalink.

The company is proposing a $1 billion Western Alberta power line from the Genesee power plant west of Edmonton to Langdon, just east of Calgary.

The proposed line has been the centre of controversy and faced strong opposition particularly in Central Alberta. Opponents have alleged that they have been spied on in the past for their vocal opposition and have o disputed the cost impact the construction of the line will have long-term for consumers in addition to health concerns and farming issues on property where the lines will cross

According to information in advertisements taken out in local newspapers including the Review, Altalink is plan-ning a more efficient and higher voltage direct current (DC) technology that would require smaller towers and thus use less physical space.

The company is also proposing an increased landowner compensation package as well as greater input from Albertans on the best route for the proposed line via the open houses and information centres.

The open house in Olds will be Monday, Feb. 22 at the Olds College Alumni Centre from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. From March 22 to 26 there will be information displays on the project set up from 12 noon to 8 p.m. at the Frank Grisdale Building on the campus of Olds College.

Curler reaches Games

BY TAMARA CUNNINGHAM Didsbury Review

A passion for curling has driven Courtney Missikewitz to the 2010 Alberta Winter

Two weeks ago, the 14year-old Didsbury skip and her rink swept away their competition during a bonspiel in Sundre, Jan. 9, to advance to the winter games in Bonnyville, Feb 4-7.

was a close game between her foursome - with Megan Moffat, Nicole Aberle and Dacey Brown - and their Sundre opponents, she recalls

In a last rock scenario. Sundre missed a win; losing by two points and allowing the Missikewitz rink to advance to the last game for

"We were so excited when won. It is a step up, Missikewitz said, last week

Missikewitz has been curling for the last four years, but only in the last year has she begun to play the sport competitively

Her inspiration is former Didsbury curler, Charley Thomas, who won an Alberta Provincials title in 2004 and represented Alberta and won in the 2006 Canadian Junior Curling Championships.

"I keep thinking that if he was able to do it, then it could happen to me too," she

"He's my role model."

Thomas came back to Didsbury two years ago, dangling a scholarship to Alberta Rocks - a summer camp for young curlers. Missike won it and it made her all the more determined to follow in his footsteps.

She said her rink has high ambitions, with an eye on provincial and national and national championships. They formed four months ago.

We are not stopping here at the winter games. We are going as far as we can," she said.

Cameron reaches potential

TAMARA CUNNINGHAM Didsbury Review

It's a matter of better late than never for Bretton Cameron

The Didsbury product and Medicine Hat Tigers centre is making the most of a second lease on his junior hockey career and he is having his best statistical season to back it up.

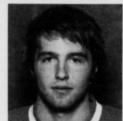

He's among the top 25 scorers in the league with totals of 28-22-50 in 50 as of Monday. His offence has helped the Tigers clinch a playoff spot and currently sit second in the east-conference to the Saskatoon Blades

With the points thrown up on the board, Coach Will Desjardins is glad he brought Cameron back onto the team.

Things weren't so certain for the 20-year-old this year In his first two years with the Tigers, Cameron hasn't risen to the promise seen in him at the Bantam level when the team took him in the annual bantam draft. In his first full year with the Tigers in 2007-08 he scored 11 goals 19 and had 30 assists in 59 games, but last year his totals slipped to 11-11-22 in Going into the season there were also five other overage players vying for one of three spots available on the roster.

46 games

"I was told that if I worked hard over the summer and came back in shape and ready to play, I'd have a strong chance," Cameron

"There were no guaran-tees, but I was confident."

Coach Will Desjardins who also coached Canada's World Junior team, brought him back, believing the strong leader could prove his mettle on the ice this sea

"In other years, there was always some injury that hurt him from reaching his potential." he said.

"But he proved in his younger ages that he is a scorer, so we wanted to take a chance on him again.

Many of Cameron's team mates have already been selected in the NHL Entry Draft, something that didn't happen for the Didsbury native when he first became eligible.

Time will tell if Cameron will be picked up too, Desjardins said, but insisted it's not too late.

Dragons on fire

DHS senior boys capture Bentley tourney

BY TAMARA CUNNINGHAM

To say the senior boys basketball team was in the zone over the week end would be an understatement

It was an offensive explosion from the minute the local squad hit the courts at the annual Bentley tourna-ment and the game – against St.Mary's School of Taber - paved the way for the Dragons to take the tournament

The 1A Taber team had the Dragons trailing behind by four to 16 points until the fourth quarter. With five minutes on the clock, the DHS boys bounced back to tie the game 95-95.

"We were in overtime and trailing behind the team again until they fouled twice – with the coach losing his head," said Coach Jeff Johnson. "We pulled ahead 112-110 and were able to maintain that for the last 21 econds of the game."

The referee said later that in all his ears on the hardcourt he's never seen both opponents reach the 100-point

"It was pretty intense ... a real battle," Johnson said.

Post Mark Dueck shone during the game, throwing 13 points on the board against St. Mary's to reach a career high. Post Braden Over-water was dominant on the inside.

The Dragons went on to play Coronation to win 74-54 and home team, Bentley, for a 96-76 win.

The next tournament is Jan 29 and 30 in Pigeon Lake and the Dragons have their sights set on West Island

The 2A team is ranked seventh by Alberta Schools' Association.

NOTICE OF RESCHEDULING OF HEARING

APPLICATION NO. 1613402

PENGROWTH CORPORATION

HARMATTAN EAST FIELD

The Energy Resources Conservation Board (ERCB/Board) will hold a public hearing of Application No. 1613402 (Application) at the Didsbury Memorial Complex & Aq. Centre, 1702–21 Avenue, Didsbury, Alberta, commencing on April 21, 2010, at 9:00 a.m. All interveners to this proceeding must be present at the commencement of hearing to register their appearance.

The ERCB had scheduled a public hearing of the Application at the Lone Pine Agricultural Society, RR2, Didsbury, Alberta, to commence on December 8, 2009, at 1:00 p.m. The Board received a request from Pengrowth Corporation (Pengrowth) to reschedule the hearing and agreed to grant the request.

Description of the Application

Pengrowth submitted an application, in accordance with Section 7.001 of the Oil and Gas Conservation Regulations, requesting approval to construct and operate an electr wellhead booster compressor in Legal Subdivision 5, Section 3, Township 31, Range 2, West of the 5th Meridian, in the Harmattan East Field. The addition of the wellhead compressor unit at the existing facility would boost gas from the existing wellhead into an existing gas gathering system. The maximum hydrogen sulphide concentration would be about 15.0 moles per kilomole or 1.5 per cent. The proposed compressor would be located about 4.2 kilometres southwest of the Town of Didsbury.

Pengrowth Corporation, 2100, 222-3 Avenue SW, Calgary, Alberta T2P 084, Attention: Korin Egginton: Telephone: 403-213-3656; Fax: 403-781-9053

HVAC system gets new life

Feds help keep pool costs low

BY TAMARA CUNNINGHAM

Didsbury Revieu

Swimmers avoided higher fees this month as federal monies were handed over to upgrade the pool's heat-ing ventilation and air conditioning system.

The fix at the Didsbury Memorial Complex is expected to tally $320,000 and without government aid the town would have looked to residents to cover the cost, said Mayor Brian Wittal.

.Hopefully we won't have to do that now," he said. MP Blake Richards presented a cheque to the town January 5, totalling $106,667 or a third of the cost. Provincial and municipal governments will pick up the rest of the bill.

"For us one of the big things here is to try and stimulate the economy and create jobs in a time of recession ... but more importantly create benefits for the future citizens of this town," Richards said about the new system.

The current HVAC structure will be replaced before September, this year.

It's good news, said Charlie MacDonald, public works manager for the Town of Didsbury.

The 15-year-old make up air units, designed to pull in air from the outside, were dropping snow and moisture onto the furnaces and causing the boilers to break

"When we looked at what to do about it, we realized we couldn't just replace the furnaces because they weren't the only problem. It was the whole technology," MacDonald said.

"We don't want to be sucking in snow from the out-

The town isn't sure what the new HVAC technology will look like until the job goes to tender, but says it will be asking companies to come up with something energy efficient.

It's hoped this will last another 15 years.
